Dr Gary Butler MBChB (Sheff., 1989); DRCOG (1992); MRCGP (1993); FRACGP (2006); MMedEd (2006)

Gary has been involved in medical education for almost 20 years, starting in the undergraduate arena as a part-time tutor in the department of general practice. Over a period of five years he transitioned from full time general practice to a full time clinical academic post at the University of Sheffield retaining two sessions of general practice a week. In the full time academic role Gary was involved in curriculum design and reform, the development of new methods of delivering both teaching and assessment as well as the integration of communication and consultation skills across the whole five years of an undergraduate curriculum.

In 2006 Gary came to Australia to develop the new medical school at the University of Wollongong as well as continuing clinical practice which he then returned to full time. Gary is now one of the owners of probably the largest private owned general practices south of Sydney that currently has 14 doctors, is a training practice and teaches medical students, he is a GP supervisor with GP Synergy and heads up the medical student teaching.

In the last three years Gary has the RACGP National Assessment Advisor for the KFP exam and currently works two days a week in that role. In this role he is continually developing the KFP exam and involved in increasing transparency in the College assessment process which has included the public exam reports and developing new assessment material to support the candidates, their supervisors and mentors as well as the training organisations.

In his spare time Gary creates with yarn and textile as mental yoga, designing quilts and knitting (having won awards for both) as well as spinning and weaving. Gary has just become a grandfather and is slowly transitioning from denial to acceptance about this next stage in his life. You can see some of his creations and musing on instagram at #live.breathe.create or his recently neglected and needing updating blog live.breathe.create.com.
